OBAMA MEETS CASTRO IN THE HEART OF REVOLUTIONARY HAVANA

President Barack Obama was received by Cuban President Raul Castro in Havana on Monday at the start of historic talks where the U.S. leader will press his counterpart for economic and democratic reforms while hearing complaints about U.S. sanctions. Obama arrived in Cuba on Sunday on a trip that comes 15 months after he and Castro agreed to end five decades of Cold War-era animosity and work to normalize relations. On the first full day of his visit, he went to the heart of Cuba's Communist system, laying a wreath in Revolution Square at the memorial to independence hero Jose Marti.

SMALLER IPHONE EXPECTED AS APPLE FACES DROP IN SALES

2 Apple is expected to launch a smaller, cheaper iPhone on Monday aimed at emerging markets and possibly China, the world's biggest buyer of smartphones, as it looks to reverse a decline in worldwide sales of its most important product. The launch of such a phone — expected to be called the iPhone SE — would represent Apple's second bid for the crowded mid-tier market after an unsuccessful foray three years ago. It might give the world's best-known technology company a boost in the fast-growing Indian, Middle East and African markets but also risks cutting its average phone prices and profit margins.

FLORIDA JURY TO WEIGH PUNITIVE DAMAGES IN HOGAN SEX TAPE CASE

3 Former professional wrestler Hulk Hogan returned to a Florida courtroom on Monday to argue that the Gawker website should have to pay significant punitive damages on top of the $115 million it must pay for posting a sex tape online. Hogan, whose given name is Terry Bollea, is arguing the $60 million for emotional distress and $55 million for economic damages that a jury awarded him last week has not sent a strong enough message to the media company. Gawker plans to appeal the decision in a civil case that has drawn wide interest for testing boundaries between a celebrity's privacy rights and press liberties in the digital age. REUTERS

Ninety years and counting for NYC cabaret laws

A Prohibition-era law that requires a special license dubbed an "assault on expression."

ALAN KRAWITZ
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

A popular song from the 1980s said that "you can dance if you want to," but in New York City, that may not exactly be the case thanks to a Prohibition-era law that persists to this day limiting recreational dancing in the Big Apple.

The city's much-derided cabaret law dates back to 1926 and states that if three or more people decide to dance in a bar or club, a special "cabaret license" is needed. City history says the law was originally enacted to keep Harlem jazz clubs in check and to prevent racial intermingling.

Greg Miller, executive director of Dance Parade, a nonprofit founded in response to the city's cabaret laws, called the laws an "assault on expression."

Miller explained it was back in 2007, in response to an unsuccessful legal challenge to the city's cabaret laws, when social dancing was determined by New York's State Supreme Court to be unprotected by the First Amendment that his group held its first dance parade to showcase more than 75 dance styles and cultures to demonstrate the expressiveness of recreational or "social" dancing.

"A re-evaluation of the current NYC cabaret laws must be part of the conversation when discussing personal freedom of expression," said Karen Kriegel, artistic director and dancer for WDI-World Dance Initiative in New York City.

There are only about 127 cabaret license holders citywide of NYC's more than 12,000 bars and clubs, according to the city's department of consumer affairs.

Miller said the reason so few venues have licenses is due to "bureaucratic hoops," owners are required to jump through.

Such hoops include approvals from the building and fire departments; requirements for digital video surveillance and licensing fees that can range from $300 to more than $1,000 depending on venue size and date of filing.

Spokespeople for the mayor's office and the city's Department of Consumer Affairs did not offer comment.

Miller and others contend that cabaret laws are used as a tool by the city to enforce quality-of-life issues such as noise complaints and also to control bars and clubs that become trouble spots.

Mayor Giuliani used the law in the late '90s as part of his quality-of-life campaign to rid neighborhoods of problem nightspots.

A police source, with knowledge of the city's cabaret enforcement, agreed the law is used as a tool.

"The law is archaic and not particularly useful, but it's a tool police use when they're having problems with a particular location," the source said.

He added that the law cuts both ways by helping police to control problem locations that may be havens for illegal drug use and/or gang activity but it also can be tough on smaller bars and clubs, such as many Latin dance spots above 59th Street.

Andrew Muchmore, an attorney who also owns Muchmore's Café in Williamsburg, has an ongoing case in federal court challenging the law.

He filed the suit in 2014 claiming that the cabaret law is "applied arbitrarily and infringes on freedom of assembly and expression."

"It's time for New York City to get rid of this archaic law and allow us to freely express ourselves," said city dance promoter Kim Hayes. "We, the people, the dancers will continue to fight this law until it is repealed."

FanDuel, DraftKings shut down gaming in New York

The fantasy is over for New York gamblers.

The DraftKings website GETTY IMAGES

Top daily fantasy sports companies FanDuel and DraftKings agreed to stop taking money in New York on Monday, amid a months-long fight with the state's attorney general over whether the games are illegal gambling.

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman said the companies had agreed to immediately stop operating paid contests in the state and that an appeal of an injunction against the two companies would be heard by the state's Appellate Division in September.

Schneiderman declared the games to be "nothing more than a rebranding of sports betting" and demanded the companies shut down in New York in November.

A New York Supreme Court judge issued an injunction against the companies in December, but it was later suspended by a higher court.

"New York is a critical state for FanDuel," the company — which is headquartered in Manhattan — said in a statement confirming the agreement. "While it is disheartening for us to restrict access to paid contests in our home state, we believe this is in the best interest of our company."

DraftKings said it would continue to work with state lawmakers to enact legislation to make sure the games are legal.

Schneiderman said that if daily fantasy sports are legalized in New York this year, the gambling claims against the companies will be dropped. There have been bills proposed at New York state's Senate and Assembly to make the games legal. REUTERS

Fantasy sports

Fantasy sports started in 1980 and surged in popularity online. Participants typically create teams that span an entire season in professional sports, including American football, baseball, basketball and hockey.

Daily fantasy sports, a turbo-charged version of the season-long game, have developed over the past decade. Players draft teams in games played in just one evening or over a weekend.

This has enabled fans to spend money on the games with a frequency that critics say is akin to sports betting.

New Jersey mall's Easter Bunny brawls with upset parent after kid falls off chair

A man employed as the Easter Bunny at a New Jersey mall brawled with a father whose child slipped to the floor while having a picture taken with the costumed character, authorities said on Monday, stunning shoppers watching the mayhem unfold.

Jersey City Police were investigating possible charges against the 22-year-old man playing the Easter Bunny at Newport Centre Mall and the father of the 1-year-old girl, said city spokeswoman Jennifer Morrill.

After the child slid out of the photo-op chair on Sunday afternoon, the father began to verbally and physically attack the bunny, the costumed cottontail told police.

"A fight ensued between both the father and the Easter Bunny," Morrill said in an email, and both were taken to the Jersey City Medical Center-Barnabas Health with minor injuries.

As rabbits go, the mall's Easter Bunny looked more like Harvey, the towering 6-footer who befriended by Jimmy Stewart in the 1950 movie classic, than little Peter Cottontail.

Video posted online after the incident shows a hulking character wearing a white fuzzy suit and a royal blue top coat and tails throwing punches before being separated from the other man by mall goers.

Suddenly he stalks back toward the man, rips off the fuzzy gloves and starts swinging, the video shows. He is soon brought to the ground by customers and security officers at the mall, located across the Hudson River from lower Manhattan.

A video still from the brawl PROVIDED

"No charges have been filed at this time as detectives are continuing to investigate and speak with witnesses as it remains unclear who initiated the incident," Morrill said.

The spokeswoman did not say whether the parent had offered a different version of events, adding that no more information was immediately available. REUTERS

Man hurt in Tribeca crane collapse to sue city for $30M

A man injured in February's fatal Tribeca crane collapse said he now plans to sue the city for $30 million.

Thomas O'Brien, 73, a resident of North Easton, Massachusetts, suffered fractures to his spine and skull when the crane that collapsed on Feb. 5 partly landed on his parked car while he was in it, the New York Daily News has reported.

A legal complaint filed on Friday by O'Brien claimed the Department of Buildings acted with "negligence, recklessness and carelessness" regarding its construction-monitoring duties at the crane site on Worth Street, the Daily News added.

"The city knew for several days that the wind gusts were going to reach 40 mph prior to the accident, and they could have acted sooner," Gothamist quoted O'Brien's attorney Jonathan Damashek.

The cause of the collapse is under investigation. JASON NUCKOLLS

Respect My Vote! campaign looks to engage beyond Election Day

Rev. Lennox Yearwood
SHANA SCHNUR PHOTOGRAPHY

The purpose of the campaign is to push individuals to get involved in all elections that can shape their communities.

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

With Election Day just months away, one campaign is hoping to encourage individuals to get out off the sidelines and let their voices be heard.

The Hip Hop Caucus — a nonprofit and nonpartisan organization which connects the hip-hop community to young people and members of urban communities to motivate participation in the civic process — launched Tuesday its 2016 Respect My Vote! campaign.

The nonpartisan campaign, which first kicked off during the 2008 elections, aims to help register, educate and organize voters between the ages of 18 to 40 years old.

"This campaign is focused on getting excitement around the process," said Rev. Lennox Yearwood Jr., president and CEO of the Hip Hop Caucus, who was in New York City to launch the campaign. "Getting disenfranchised communities to know that their voice matters."

As part of the process to encourage voter registration and activism, the campaign has been enlisting the help of celebrities who serve as representatives for the campaign and also help reach out to a larger crowd of potential voters.

Previous celebrities involved in the campaign included T.I. and 2 Chainz.

This year's first celebrity spokesman is Charlamagne Tha God, the host of the radio show "The Breakfast Club" and star of MTV2's "Uncommon Sense with Charlamagne Tha God."

According to Yearwood, getting celebrities to participate makes engaging in the process more exciting for some people and pushes other to go out and vote.

> "You can't really sit on the sideline during this process. You matter, not just your vote."
> Yearwood

"It's the first step but it's a major first step, because it then says not only are you going to vote, you are going to hold whoever wins accountable and measurable," Yearwood said.

Unlike in previous years, social media will play a large role in getting people involved with the campaign, using the hashtag #RespectMyVote and also having a large presence both on the campaign and Hip Hop Caucus' websites.

Yearwood added that he encourages individuals to also use a form of expression they feel comfortable with — such as poetry or music — the express themselves.

"For this generation of young people, they view this election process as very important," Yearwood said. "This is a unique generation, I wouldn't say they are quite revolutionary, they are solutionary. They want to find solutions to these huge problems."

Although the campaign is launching in time to encourage people to vote in this year's upcoming presidential election, Yearwood said that the overall purpose of the campaign is to push individuals to get involved in all elections that can shape their communities and lives.

He added that is it important for voters to get to know about the policies, how candidates address each policy and become active citizens.

"We want people to engage in the process. When people engage it helps democracy overall," he said. "We want people to be engaged up to Election Day and post-election day."

And for people who might feel like their vote doesn't matter or opt out of voting, Yearwood reminds them that it is not the vote that only counts — it's each of them as individuals.

"You can't really sit on the sideline during this process," he said. "You matter, not just your vote."

A police officer was shot and killed while sitting in his personal vehicle on Monday morning near a defunct movie theater complex in the suburban New Jersey borough of Sayreville, local media reported.

The incident took place next to the former Amboy Cinemas complex off the Garden State Parkway, about 34 miles southwest of New York City, according to NBC4 New York and other media, which cited law enforcement sources.

The officer may have been investigating a report of a suspicious person when the gunfire broke out at the theater complex, which closed about 10 years ago, the reports said.

Neither the Sayreville Police Department nor the Middlesex County Prosecutor's Office immediately responded to calls for comment. REUTERS

Grand Central Parkway crash kills one, leaves two seriously injured in Queens

A high-speed car crash late Sunday night in Queens has left one motorist dead and two passengers in area hospitals with serious injuries.

Shortly before 11 p.m., police responded to a report of an accident on the westbound side of Grand Central Parkway at 100th Street, authorities stated.

At the scene, officials found that the driver, 42, and front-seat passenger, 46, both men, were unconscious.

The two were taken to Elmhurst Hospital where the driver was pronounced dead and the passenger remained in critical condition, according to police.

A backseat passenger, a 37-year-old woman, was injured by awake when police arrived, authorities explained. She was taken to New York Presbyterian Hospital.

The Collision Investigation Squad determined that the vehicle was being driven at a high rate of speed when the driver lost control and hit the 100th Street concrete bridge support, according to police.

Authorities are still investigating the incident. JASON NUCKOLLS

Suspect arrested in Queens machete attack

Police have arrested a suspect who now faces assault and weapons charges stemming from a weekend machete attack outside a Queens restaurant.

Authorities have charged Guillermo Torres, 20, with three counts of assault and a weapon possession charge after he allegedly attacked three men with a machete, police reported.

Around 4:30 a.m. on Sunday, police said Torres got into an argument with three customers at the Cibao Bar and Restaurant at 104-22 Northern Boulevard. He then left the restaurant but waited outside with a machete for the three men to leave.

When the trio departed, Torres allegedly slashed the victims repeatedly, causing serious injuries, authorities added.

The three victims, aged 19, 22 and 32, were all taken to area hospitals in stable condition, according to officials. JASON NUCKOLLS

Con man drives off Brooklyn pier on his sentencing day

Paul Simoneschi scammed 13 victims out of $2.5 million.

MATT LEE

matthew.lee@metro.us

Simoneschi CBS

A con man and swindler chose to face the waters off Brooklyn rather than his sentencing in court Monday, the New York Post reported.

Paul Simoneschi, 70, of Staten Island, dove off the 69th Street Pier in Bay Ridge and survived, according to the Post.

He is now in stable condition at Lutheran Medical Center.

"Simoneschi is accused of scamming 13 victims — including a 94-year-old — out of $2.5 million collectively. Authorities said his actions constitute a hate crime," CBS2 reported.

Why a hate crime? According to Brooklyn District Attorney Ken Thompson, "it's a hate crime because this defendant targeted a group of individuals based on their age."

Simoneschi, a married father of four and a grandfather of six, took a plea deal in January.

Simoneschi faces up to 12 years in prison, reports said.

Nine injured after MTA bus crashes into overpass in Midtown

A handful of people were injured just before rush hour Monday afternoon after an MTA bus crashed into an overpass on the FDR Drive in Manhattan, according to reports.

The incident happened just before 4:15 p.m., ABC7 New York reported, at 34th Street and FDR Drive in Midtown.

ABC7 added that according to the MTA a QM11 bus was entering the FDR Drive from 34th Street when the driver allegedly claimed he lost control of the bus and hit the overpass.

Nine people were injured, ABC7 reported, and three of them were taken to a nearby hospital.

No one sustained life-threatening injuries. Six people refused medical help.

According to NBC4 New York, witnesses saw people coming off the bus holding their necks. One person was seen being taken out on a stretcher.

A passenger on the bus — which goes from downtown Manhattan to Queens — told NBC4 that the bus driver told the passengers that he lost control and seemed "very remorseful and apologetic."

The FDNY tweeted photos from the scene showing firefighters removing an injured passenger from the bus.

A Texas man suspected of having sex on a Las Vegas Ferris wheel last month was killed in a Houston carjacking over the weekend in an incident that started outside a strip club, police said Monday.

Phillip Panzica, 27, was fatally shot early Saturday and his body dumped on the side of the road, the Houston Police Department said. Two suspects found driving a stolen Kia belonging to Panzica's fiancée were taken into custody about 300 miles away later the same day, they said.

Panzica had been outside the strip club waiting for his fiancée, a dancer at the establishment. The suspects, identified as Bryant Watts, 28, and Aaron Jones 31, got in the car with Panzica and the fiancée, who was not identified.

The suspects stole a large amount of cash from the fiancée and took her car, police said.

They are suspected of fatally shooting Panzica and forcing the fiancée out of the car, police said. The suspects have been charged with capital murder and no lawyer was listed for them.

Panzica gained national attention when he was arrested in February on a charge of having sex with a different woman in an all-glass cabin of the Las Vegas Ferris wheel. REUTERS

Number of US government 'cyber incidents' jumped in 2015

The U.S. government was hit by more than 77,000 "cyber incidents" like data thefts or other security breaches in fiscal year 2015, a 10 percent increase over the previous year, according to a White House audit.

Part of the uptick stems from federal agencies improving their ability to identify and detect incidents, the annual performance review from the Office and Management and Budget said.

The report, released on Friday, defines cyber incidents broadly as "a violation or imminent threat of violation of computer security policies, acceptable use policies, or standard computer security practices." Only a small number of the incidents would be considered as significant data breaches.

National security and intelligence officials have long warned that cyberattacks are among the most serious threats facing the United States. President Barack Obama asked Congress last month for $19 billion for cyber security funding across the government in his annual budget request, an increase of $5 billion over the previous year.

The government's Office of Personnel Management was victim of a massive hack that began in 2014 and was detected last year. Some 22 million current and former federal employees and contractors in addition to family members had their Social Security numbers, birthdays, addresses and other personal data pilfered in the breach.

That event prompted the government to launch a 30-day "cybersecurity sprint" to boost cyber security within each federal agency by encouraging adoption of multiple-factor authentication and addressing other vulnerabilities. REUTERS

USS Eisenhower resumes flight operations after accident

The USS Dwight D. Eisenhower aircraft carrier resumed flights of fixed-wing aircraft Sunday, two days after a flight accident that injured eight sailors who were working on the ship's flight deck, a Navy spokesman said.

Three sailors remain hospitalized at Sentara Norfolk General Hospital in Norfolk, Virginia, while a fourth is at Portsmouth Naval Medical Center, also in Virginia, said Navy Commander Mike Kafka, spokesman for Naval Air Force Atlantic. All four are in stable condition and some may be released soon, he said.

Kafka said an aircraft mishap team was on board to investigate Friday's accident, which occurred off the coast of Virginia when one of the ship's arresting gear cables snapped during the attempted landing of an E2-C Hawkeye airborne early warning aircraft. REUTERS

Secure near-perfect American Silver Eagles for only $24.95

Millions of people collect the American Eagle Silver Dollar. In fact it's been the country's most popular Silver Dollar for thirty years. But many people who buy an American Eagle Silver Dollar don't realize that they might actually be buying the wrong coin!

There's elite, high quality Silver Eagle coins that many don't know about. Coins that have been professionally certified to be of near-flawless quality.

If you're someone who doesn't want to settle for run of the mill—but also doesn't want to pay a huge premium for high quality—then keep reading:

Top Quality = Peace of Mind

American Eagle Silver Dollars are issued by the U.S. Mint by the millions. In recent years, over 40 MILLION Silver Eagles have been issued per year. But less than 2% of all the coins struck in a given year ever earn the highest quality grades. Respected independent grading services, such as Professional Coin Grading Service (PCGS), examine tens of thousands of coins to determine which have earned the highest grade of quality. Coin grading is based on a universal 70-point scale. The second highest grade any coin can achieve is a near-flawless Mint State 69 grade (MS69).

When you own a certified 69-grade American Silver Eagle, you own something that less than 2% of the population can ever claim. Compared to the total mintage struck, there are relatively few PCGS graded Silver Eagles. Better yet, owning a graded coin gives you peace of mind because both the coin and its grade are sealed in an archival acrylic holder. Professionally graded coins are universally accepted, but are also harder to find, which adds to their collectible value.

Clinton criticizes Trump's neutral stance on Israel

Clinton told the American Israel Public Affairs Committee conference that Trump would undermine Israel's security by taking an even-handed approach to negotiations between the Israelis and Palestinians.

Hillary Clinton attacked Republican Donald Trump on Monday for taking a neutral stance toward Israeli-Palestinian peace efforts, in a preview of a possible general election battle between them.

Clinton GETTY IMAGES

"America can't ever be neutral when it comes to Israel's security and survival," Clinton told the pro-Israel lobbying group, without mentioning Trump by name. "Anyone who doesn't understand that has no business being our president."

Trump, the Republican front-runner, was to address the AIPAC conference later in the day, along with his Republican rivals, Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas and Ohio Gov. John Kasich. Clinton's Democratic challenger, Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, was not appearing at the event.

Trump has drawn fire for his position on Middle East peace negotiations. The billionaire has described himself as extremely pro-Israel but has said he would take a "neutral" stance in trying to negotiate an elusive peace settlement between Israel and the Palestinians. REUTERS

Trump names his foreign policy team led by Sen. Sessions

Donald Trump on Monday unveiled a partial list of his foreign policy advisers in an interview with The Washington Post, after saying last week that he mostly consults himself on international affairs.

The advisory team, headed by Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, includes terrorism expert Walid Phares, energy industry executive Carter Page, international energy lawyer George Papadopoulos, former government inspector general Joe Schmitz, and former Army Lt. Gen. Keith Kellogg, he told the Post in an on-the-record editorial board meeting, according to the media company.

BRIEF

Trump 'needs all the help he can get,' donors say

Donald Trump often tells crowds at his campaign rallies that he doesn't need outside financial support to get to the White House, but some of his fans are starting to feel differently.

Donors to an independent political spending group formed to promote Trump's candidacy said in interviews on Sunday they were worried by reports describing the millions of dollars Trump's opponents are spending to attack him.

They said they admired the billionaire businessman's professed financial independence but thought a cash boost would help keep his fight for the Republican nomination fair. So 767 people sent in small sums — $25 here, $100 there — hoping it would help prepare him to face his many, moneyed foes.

"He needs all the help he can get," said Diane Abair, 83, a real estate agent in Redding, California, who sent $50 to the group, Great America PAC.

US prosecuting fewer drug offenses: Justice Department

A 14 percent decrease from fiscal 2012 to 2014 was followed by an additional 6 percent decline to 19,792 federal cases prosecuted in fiscal 2015, the department reported.

A narcotics task force enters a home of a suspected drug dealer in Manassas Park, Virginia. GETTY IMAGES

U.S. prosecutors charged nearly 5,000 fewer drug cases in 2015 than three years earlier, after the Obama administration decided to target only the most serious cases, the Justice Department said Monday.

While state prosecutors can take on drug cases, federal prosecutors have been instructed since 2013 to charge fewer drug offenders to reduce disparities in sentencing that disproportionately affect minorities.

The policy, known as Smart on Crime, was also intended to avoid charging certain nonviolent, low-level drug offenders with the mandatory minimum sentence.

The Justice Department said 47 percent of the drug cases prosecuted in 2015 carried the mandatory minimum sentence, compared with 61.5 percent in 2012.

Some assistant U.S. attorneys had raised concerns that lower sentences would make defendants less willing to cooperate.

But Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates said the rate of cooperation has not changed. "It is always going to be in a defendant's interest to do whatever he or she can to be able to cooperate and to get a lower sentence," she told reporters at a briefing.

Yates said she was hopeful bipartisan support for sentencing reform in Congress would result in legislation this year, preventing policies like Smart on Crime from being dropped by the next administration.

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight– they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly – sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

Supreme Court agrees to hear patent fight with Samsung-Apple

The United States Supreme Court stepped into the high-profile patent fight between the world's two fiercest smartphone rivals, Apple and Samsung, agreeing to hear Samsung's appeal of what it contends were excessive penalties for copying the patented designs of the iPhone.

Samsung Electronics paid Apple Inc. more than $548 million in December related to a jury verdict from 2012. It is seeking to pare back the $399 million of that amount that was awarded for infringing on the designs of the iPhone's rounded-corner front face, bezel and colorful grid of icons, saying they contributed only marginally to a complex device.

A Samsung spokeswoman said in a statement the Supreme Court's review "can lead to a fair interpretation of patent law that will support creativity and reward innovation."

An Apple representative declined to comment.

Apple sued in 2011, claiming the South Korean electronics company stole its technology and ripped off the look of the iPhone.

Last May, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit in Washington upheld the 2012 patent-infringement verdict.

Shoulder Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful shoulder arthritis – science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here is why: Researchers have discovered an natural gel like medicine that is like "joint oil." This all-natural gel is one of the naturally occurring lubricating substances in your shoulder joint that cushions and lubricates the joint which dries out over time due to wear-and-tear, age or injury. But when doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your shoulder joint by using advanced digital imaging technology – it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It lubricates the joint and can decrease pain and stiffness. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months. Years for some. Often times shoulder surgery can be avoided.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a trained health care professional.

Most Insurance Plans Cover These Treatments: Most Union Plans 1199 GHI Work Comp Aetna, Cigna United Health Care (in or out of network) Empire Plan Empire BC BS Medicare AARP United Health Care Oxford ... and others

And the great news is: There is a free report and information kit available that tells you everything you need to know about this treatment. It also tells you all about cutting-edge medical clinics right here in New York City that are offering this cutting-edge treatment with tremendous success.

Justin Bieber has more throwback pics of Selena Gomez

Damn, Justin. At it again with the creepy/desperate Instagram posts about your ex. The singer lit up his favorite social media feed recently with yet another throwback pic of himself — from way back in 2011 or so, before all the tattoos and Photoshopped muscle mass and arrests — smooching ex-girlfriend Selena Gomez along with the caption "Feels," all to the delight of his 62.2 million Instagram followers. (Just sit there a second and think about that number. Terrifying, isn't it?)

This is far from the first time Bieber has reminisced about the good old days so publicly. But he has been pretty quiet about it, laying off the borderline stalker behavior for nearly three months. But that's about all the restraint he could muster. For her part, Gomez did "like" the photo, leaving fans to wonder even more what exactly is going on between the two.

Khloe Kardashian klashing with 'Kocktails' krew

Apparently when Khloe Kardashian made the deal for her new talk show, "Kocktails with Khloe," she didn't quite understand how much the show's producers were expecting her to rope in her family as guests, and that's causing some tension behind the scenes.

"Executives have urged her to include at least one of her family members on every single episode," a source tells Radar Online. "The producers at the network really believe that people are tuning in to the show to see the off-script Kardashian drama carry over into 'Kocktails.'

"But now Khloe said that she does not need to have them on for this show to succeed. Everyone around her tends to disagree." Ouch.

Fans have very different reactions to Harry Styles and Adele photo hacks

Two new data hacks raise the same question: How much of a celebrity's life belongs to their fans?

First, personal photos of Adele, including a sonogram scan of her son, showed up on Facebook, believed to be from a hack of boyfriend Simon Konecki's email. "I was appalled and upset for Adele when I saw the pictures. They are really private and should not be passed around," a fan tells the Sun.

But not every fan feels the same. Someone else hacked the iCloud account of Harry Styles' mom, Anne Cox, and made away with several photos of Styles on vacation with rumored girlfriend Kendall Jenner. The fan who posted them sounded quite disgruntled on Twitter — for an entirely different reason: "If I go to jail, I did this for all the Harry stans who don't get s— from Harry."

Dame Helen wants feminists to speak out

The Oscar-winning actress talks drones, sexism and whether she looks like Jennifer Lawrence.

matt.prigge@metro.us

Dame Helen Mirren is never not opinionated. That's doubly so when talking "Eye in the Sky," a British drama about drone warfare. Mostly unfolding in real time, it traces as forces, from her colonel in London to a drone pilot (Aaron Paul) in Las Vegas, try to blow up a house containing terrorists — without accidentally killing a little girl playing near their target. Our conversation ranges from heavy subjects to one that's tabloid-light.

How did your thoughts on drones evolve on this film?

You know, you can't just say, "Drones — what's my take on drones?" Well, I don't want a drone coming into my back garden and taking pictures of me sunbathing. But I'm sure as a surveillance tool, it's incredibly valuable and useful. You might as well say, "What's your attitude about telephones?" People can phone each other up and plan terrible things. Do we ban telephones? It's a technology we're going to have to live with. So the question becomes how and where do we use them or not use them?

This is a drama with a woman on the poster. Do you see Hollywood moving away from a purely boy- and superhero-driven landscape?

Yes, of course it will. People do need to speak up. I learned this with feminism. I've always been a feminist, but when I was younger I was never a proselytizing feminist. I totally believed in my right to do and be whatever I wanted to be, and anything that was holding me back was profoundly unfair. But I never joined a feminist group. But you know what? You do need to speak up, you do need to articulate the issues. And you get s— for it, you get mocked for it. But you're on the right side of history when you speak up. And things do change. Dialogue is really important.

Mirren = JLaw?

I did want to ask if you've seen those web posts with side-by-side comparisons of younger pictures of you and Jennifer Lawrence now. The resemblance is uncanny.

A little bit, yeah. She is much more beautiful than I ever was. I'm not being self-depreciating. She's much, much more beautiful. But there are certain shots that I look a little bit like her. I should be so lucky, is all I can say. [Laughs]

It's been heartening that, over the last year, pieces about diversity and inequality have actually done well with readers. They get shared online. It's good for business, finally, to talk about it.

You journalists are very important, because for so long you didn't talk about it. It's funny: You can talk till you're f—ing blue in the face. I've done interviews all my life and I've always talked about it. Did anyone print it? No. [Laughs] Now it's in the zeitgeist, which is great. Mind you, that will pass as well. But the genie's out of the bottle.

'The Nest' is spring's buzziest family drama

Author Cynthia D'Aprix Sweeney tells us what inspired her debut novel that everyone is talking about.

EMILY LAURENCE
emily.laurence@metro.us

It's every writer's dream to land a million-dollar book deal from a big-name publishing house, and it's one debut author Cynthia D'Aprix Sweeney is living. Editors at essentially every major magazine as well as The New York Times are raving about her book "The Nest," which comes out today.

A family drama about three adult siblings confronting their screwup brother about squandering their collective trust fund, the heart of the book is more about emotional costs, not financial ones. We talked with Sweeney to learn more about the book and becoming a first-time fiction writer in her 40s.

What inspired the book and its characters?

I knew I wanted to write about adult siblings who were not really connected. So then it was a matter of [figuring out] why they were at odds with one another. I started thinking about why they were estranged from one another and why [each person] needed the money.

Did you know how everything was going to unfold from the start?

No, I knew very little. I started writing the story while I was in graduate school [at Columbia] and Bret Anthony Johnston [author of "Remember Me Like This"] was my adviser. The first question I asked him was, "How much do I need to know about the end?" And he said, "You don't need to know anything, but it will help if you have a sense of where you want each character to leave off emotionally." So that was my little lighthouse in the distance.

Novels about family drama can be breezy, but "The Nest" is more emotional and complex.

I learned that if I didn't genuinely care about what happened to [each character] then that character wasn't working yet. I had to go back and find their vulnerabilities. ... For me, it was necessary to make the characters not just feel like a type of person I wanted to create to make a point about something but be people who are complicated.

Your background is as a journalist. Was it hard for you to start writing fiction?

It was hard for me to get to the point where I felt I was doing it well. My first efforts were pretty terrible. It was one reason why I decided to get my [master of fine arts degree]. I felt if I had the structure of a fiction-writing program with deadlines and support, and people giving me regular feedback on my work, that I would figure out what I was doing wrong more quickly, which is true.

What is your own family like?

Nothing like the people in the book! There are four of us [kids]. I'm the oldest. We're all pretty close, although we try to stay out of each other's way. We're scattered geographically, so we get together a few times a year and there is always one really heated argument, sometimes more. But we're also really quick to forgive each other. I'm always a little distrustful of people who have zero family drama.

The Human Factor

A look at the unique degree that's poised to change the way we live and work.

JENNIFER SAWYER
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

They're questions familiar to anyone who has ever cursed the complicated installation of a new home appliance, found themselves stuck in crowded, poorly-designed arena or spent hours on the phone with a customer service representative: Why isn't this more efficient? Why can't this function better? Why is everything so complicated?

These questions resonated with Athena Ziavras, a graduate student in human factors and information design at Bentley University. Ziavras remembers noticing medical professionals working with a state-of-the-art machine, and openly admitting confusion. "All of this technology is so much more advanced, but if it's not usable, then what's the point?" she says. "You're making the people adapt to technology, rather than technology to people."

The frustration with recurring, day-to-day inefficiencies sparked Ziavras' interest in an area of study that many people may not have heard of: human factors.

"All of this technology is so advanced, but if it's not usable, then what's the point?"

Design for humans

"Human factors is really studying people — their abilities, their goals, their limitations, and using that understanding to not only design products, but increase service," explains William Gribbons, program director of human factors and information design at Bentley.

Gribbons helped develop Bentley's graduate program, which emphasizes an understanding of human behavior. Over the course of the program, students undertake research and pioneer innovative and efficient design. The degree program began in 1999, and current enrollment stands at 135 students.

"Our lives have become incredibly complicated," Gribbons says. "So many things require too much attention, effort, thinking, pain and suffering. It spills over into the business world, where design and experience have become the competitive advantage."

A competitive advantage

The quest for a competitive advantage is what drew Renee Keith to Bentley's graduate program. Keith had the opportunity to intern in the school's User Experience Center, where a team of consultants work with big-name clients from across the globe like Fidelity, Harvard Medical, Blue Cross Blue Shield and Staples. "Companies realize how much they can save with a better product overall," Keith says. "Working with someone with human factors knowledge, you can implement the best practices that make something usable."

Gribbons says the Nest thermostat exemplifies an innovation that improved an existing product by taking human factors in account. The motion-activated thermostat learns your temperature preferences, can be controlled from a smartphone and senses when the home is empty, turning the temperature down to save on energy costs.

Part of the appeal of studying human factors might be the wide range of career possibilities that students explore after graduation.

"I have students in the program who work in transportation, military applications, health care, consumer electronics, games, and people who are interested in architecture and education," Gribbons explains. "It's really now being applied to the design of everything."

For Ziavras, the program is all about creating fulfilling experiences during a period of innovation. "Ten, 15, or 20 years ago, it was, 'Who can create the latest technology?' But now that all of that is so common, user experience is what puts you above."

WAIT, drinking mushrooms is a thing?

Apparently, it's all the rage in Finland.

EMILY LAURENCE

Pounding coconut water? OK, we're game. Cactus water? Sure, why not. But mushrooms? Woah there. It turns out, drinking 'shrooms isn't such a bad idea — and no, we're not talking about the psychedelic kind.

Finland native Tero Isokauppila grew up on a farm, foraging for mushrooms, and is now spreading the gospel of the "superfood" with the power to reduce stress and lower blood pressure and cholesterol.

Humans are essentially mushrooms

When we hung out with Isokauppila recently, he told us that most people are surprised to learn that nearly half of our genetic makeup is the same as a mushroom's. Because of that, we share the same survival methods. So if we're feeling a bit sick because our immune system isn't functioning properly, eating mushrooms can help us recover faster. Another surprising fact Isokauppila tells us: Mushrooms are in 40 percent of medicine. Now you know why.

Bringing the craze Stateside

There are different kinds of mushrooms, and not all are created equal (some are even poisonous). There are four kinds that Isokauppila says are especially healthful: Reishi, Cordyceps, Chaga and Lion's Mane. And it is these four types that his beverage line of mushroom-infused coffees and hot chocolates, Four Sigmatic, revolves around.

Lion's Mane helps with concentration, making it the perfect ingredient for his coffee mix. Reishi is a big stress-reducer, so he uses it as the base ingredient in one of his hot chocolate mixes. Cordyceps and Chaga are both high in antioxidants and good for your immune system.

Isokauppila tells us mushrooms are more common to eat and drink in Finland, but he knew that to get Americans on board he needed to sweeten the deal, so to speak. Isokauppila snuck the superfood into hot chocolate and coffee mixes, which are sold at Whole Foods, Urban Outfitters and Amazon. A couple New York City cafes have also started selling mushroom-infused drinks too, including Brooklyn's Botica and Caravan of Dreams in the East Village.

But how does it taste?

A tasting of the different mushroom-infused beverages at the Metro offices received mixed reviews. Some downright didn't like it at all, some said it got better as you drank it, while a few genuinely liked it. "I had one of the coffee mixes and it made me feel alert, like a normal cup of coffee, but didn't make me feel jittery," one staffer reported. Hey, you can always just eat the mushrooms.

WCBS-TV NEW YORK "AMERICAN HEALTH FRONT" TO FEATURE JULIUS SHULMAN, MD & DALIA S. NAGEL, MD

SUNDAY, MARCH 27th, 2016 @ 5:30pm-6:00pm on WCBS-TV.

(New York, NY) Dr. Julius Shulman and Dr. Dalia S. Nagel of Eastside Eye Associates (eastsideeyes.com) to appear on the New York/New Jersey edition to discuss recent breakthrough technologies and advancements in cataract diagnosis and cataract surgery.

By age 80, more than half of all Americans either have a cataract (a clouding of the lens in the eye that causes a loss of vision) or will soon need cataract surgery, joining the ranks of the three million Americans who have cataract surgery annually. Almost 800,000 cataract operations will be performed in people under age 65, a testament to our increasingly active lifestyle. Modern cataract surgery, pioneered by Dr. Shulman and Dr. Nagel, now takes on average 20 minutes or less, with the patient often resuming normal activity within hours. Cataract surgery, accompanied by insertion of a clear, plastic intraocular lens (IOL), is statistically the most successful operation performed on the human body.

AMERICAN HEALTH FRONT will take you inside the offices of Drs. Shulman and Nagel's Eastside Eye Associates where they have examined over 20,000 cataract patients. The program will feature candid interviews with the doctors, and a rare glimpse into the most current instrumentation and successful methods of treating cataract patients. The doctors will show why in most patients, cataract removal will not only give an astounding improvement in vision, but also a chance to be spectacle-free, perhaps for the first time in years. They will guide viewers through the questions they must ask and the choices they must make to have a successful and happy outcome. Most importantly, the doctors will show viewers just how much they will benefit from this incredible procedure.

About the Doctors

Julius Shulman, M.D

Julius Shulman, M.D. is a Board Certified Ophthalmologist and Assistant Professor of Ophthalmology at New York's Mount Sinai Hospital. Since completing his residency in 1975, Dr. Shulman has performed over 15,000 surgical procedures. An early interest in cataract surgery led Dr. Shulman to pioneer the first cataract and intraocular lens implant operation at Mt. Sinai. Since then he has developed numerous surgical techniques to improve cataract outcomes for his patients, as well as surgical advancements in Laser Vision Correction. He has been on eight medical missions to India and Peru.

Dalia S. Nagel, M.D.

Dalia S. Nagel, M.D. graduated from Barnard College, Columbia University, summa cum laude, and received her medical degree from Harvard Medical School. After completing her training in ophthalmology at The Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City, Dr. Nagel was appointed Clinical Instructor, where she is active in teaching residents and students. Dr. Dalia S. Nagel is board certified by The American Academy of Ophthalmology (AAO) and practices comprehensive ophthalmology with special interests in cataract surgery and laser vision correction.

The practice offers two locations, one on the Upper East Side and TriBeCa.

Yankees, Mets notebook: Sabathia, Nova struggling greatly this spring

The Yankees don't have their rotation down pat with the regular season just two weeks away.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

C.C. Sabathia and Ivan Nova have continued to struggle in spring training, making Joe Girardi's fifth starter decision exceedingly difficult.

Sabathia, who by his own admission is notoriously poor in the exhibition months, has lived up to that advanced billing. In three starts this year, the former ace is 0-2 with a 7.36 ERA (7.1 IP). But with $25 million due to him this season, the Yankees are almost compelled to start him, especially considering Sabathia has little to no experience pitching in relief.

"I know I can pitch, and I know I can get big league hitters out," Sabathia told reporters after his latest shaky outing. "I feel healthy and I'll be ready to go."

As for Nova, his start on Sunday was one to forget. In 4.1 innings, he allowed four runs on five hits and three walks. That ballooned his spring training ERA to 4.04 in 13.1 IP.

Nova was candid with reporters after the game, saying, "Of course you want to pitch good, personally, but I cannot sit here now and hit my head against the wall because I pitched bad."

Nova added, "They're going to take their time and announce [a fifth starter] when they feel comfortable. Hopefully I'll do better the last two [starts] than this one today and see what happens at the end."

Mets

Sandy Alderson finally put to rest the rumors that swirled a couple of weeks ago that the Mets were looking at obtaining a backup for catcher Travis d'Arnaud.

"We're not looking for anybody outside the organization," Alderson told Newsday. "If we're looking for anybody outside the organization, it would be more for a Triple-A role than it would be for the major league level."

Kevin Plawecki, who filled in nicely when d'Arnaud missed parts of last season, is viewed as a promising backstop prospect, but there is ongoing discussion within the Mets organization that Plawecki would be better served getting more playing time in Triple-A Las Vegas.

C.C. Sabathia has been routinely roughed up this spring. GETTY IMAGES

"There are a number of considerations," Alderson said. "Is a guy like Plawecki better off getting more at-bats more consistently or as a backup? That's one issue. Flexibility, versatility, right versus left, that's all a consideration. There are a variety of things going on, but we want the best overall mix."

If Plawecki were to start 2016 in the minors, it appears the Mets would turn to Johnny Monell to back up d'Arnaud. Monell has just 56 career at-bats in the majors in parts of two seasons, and hit a paltry .167 for the Mets last year.

High hopes

Amed Rosario, the highest-ranked prospect in the Mets' system and the third-highest overall prospect per MLB.com, has dipped his toe into the major league waters this spring. So far the 20-year-old shortstop has taken three at-bats and recorded one hit (a single), and has seen some time in the field.

"I feel good, and I feel very proud," Rosario told reporters in Spanish.

Rosario, who is expected to start the year with Double-A Binghamton, says he's been working on pitch selection during the offseason.

"I focused on picking up pitches that used to hurt me, so I can drive the ball better," Rosario said.

Rosario hit .257 with 25 RBI and 12 stolen bases in High-A St. Lucie last year, but had 73 strikeouts compared to just 23 walks.

March Madness owes some of its success to Five-Star Basketball

Legends from college basketball and the NBA got their starts in orange T-shirts.

ROBERT ROSE
@MetroNewYork
sports@metro.us

He won't be on the sidelines coaching any team during this weekend's Sweet 16 games but "Mr. March Madness" has made a very big impact on college basketball.

His name is Leigh Klein and he is the CEO of Five-Star Basketball Camps, known for years as the place where the nation's top prep basketball players go to get better. Five-Star has been producing top-end talent since 1966 when Klein's father started the camp, and they count 500 NBA players and over 10,000 players at the Division I level during that stretch. Klein currently lives in Briarcliff Manor, New York, where Five-Star has its headquarters.

The list of names who have put on the orange camp T-shirt include Michael Jordan, Carmelo Anthony, Steph Curry, Kevin Durant, Chris Paul, Patrick Ewing and LeBron James. It is a who's who of basketball royalty.

Some, like Jordan, came to Five-Star as unknowns, and left as stars.

"Jordan, who had two offers before Five-Star, was in no one's top 100 players until he arrived at Five-Star and after one camp session, left as the No. 1 player in America. He's not alone," Klein told Metro.

"Vince Carter had a similar Five-Star story. I helped Kevin Martin get to Western Carolina, I was so impressed by his camp performance that I advised then-Catamount head coach Steve Shurina to offer him. That worked out fairly well as Martin was a first-round draft pick and has been a prolific scorer for 12 years."

Klein's career began as a gym rat, where he fell in love with the family business that he would eventually take over. He remembers playing two-on-two with the likes of Dwayne "Pearl" Washington and Ewing.

He spent time on staff at Texas and Rhode Island as an assistant following college.

This year, there will be over 100 Five-Star alumni in the NCAA Tournament, including Kansas' Wayne Selden and Maryland's Melo Trimble.

"It's always been the place where 'the teaching never stops!' and with that investment in the development of players on and off the court," Klein said. "It's been able to prepare kids for the next level and enable them to reach their highest potential."

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries Professional changes are within reach. Pursue your goals instead of just dreaming about them. Call in favors and connect with people you have worked with in the past.

Taurus Personal adjustments will eliminate stress. Update your resume so it fits current trends and shows off your versatility. Do whatever it takes to improve your relationships.

Gemini Communicate your ideas and collaborate with people who share your concerns. Get personal obligations out of the way before taking on more responsibility.

Cancer Ask for favors. Do whatever is necessary to improve your living conditions. Love is highlighted, and greater security will result if you nurture an important relationship.

Leo Protect your status and reputation. Taking on additional responsibilities will show off your attributes. Don't let a personal relationship interfere with your professional dreams.

Virgo Share your intentions with people who have something to offer. A business trip will help you get what you want. Follow through with your plans regardless of what others do.

Libra Do your own thing. Avoid pressure by making it clear what you will and will not do. Keep your assets and plans a secret until you have worked out a flawless presentation.

Scorpio If you offer help, you will get something unusual in return. A partnership will bring you closer to your goals. Change how or where you live. Negotiations will lead to success.

Sagittarius Keep busy and don't let anyone railroad you into taking on responsibilities that don't belong to you. An unusual idea of yours will put you in a good position.

Capricorn Deal with domestic matters and personal investments. An important relationship will need to be nurtured to avoid discord. Added responsibility will lead to benefits.

Aquarius Tend to your obligations and listen to complaints. Don't give problems you face with a friend or relative time to fester. Offering a fair solution will make you look good.

Pisces Money, legal and health issues will crop up if you are indulgent or take on too much. Negotiations will turn in your favor if you suggest a counteroffer with perks. EUGENIA LAST
